Mycenaean Memories: Results of the 2014 Excavations at Ksagounaki, Mani, Greece

Sunday, February 7, 2016

4:00pm

Michael C. Carlos Museum, Reception Hall
Emory University

The Diros Project was designed to complete analysis of 1000s of artifacts from the Neolithic site of Alepotrypa Cave, located in the western Mani, Greece, and to place the site into a regional archaeological context through intensive survey of Diros Bay. Survey identified a large open-air Final Neolithic settlement outside the cave, named Ksagounaki, which was excavated 2010-2014. 2014 excavations revealed evidence for the village's monumental construction using megalithic boulders, an enigmatic double burial, and an unexpected, later Mycenaean ossuary.

The lecture is sponsored by: Program in Mediterranean Archaeology, Program in Ancient Mediterranean Studies, Department of Middle Eastern and South Asian Studies, Department of Anthropology, and Michael C. Carlos Museum.

The event is free and open to the public.
